Justin Hott, Bear Stearns:

And, just one more question, with the Sally/BSG deal, with Regis stock being a big part of it and assuming your share assuming your shares get hit can Alberto walk away from this deal, are there certain provisions that you can share with us to understand what mechanisms maybe there would be about renegotiating price or just talking about what could happen here? Do they have the ability to walk away?

Randy Pearce, Executive Vice President,
Chief Financial Officer and Chief Accounting
Officer of Regis Corporation:

Justin, this is Randy, you know, no, they can't you know, the short answer to your question is no. We fully expect and hope to go forward with this. The purpose of today's call is really to talk about the third quarter performance and the year results. We have filed all of the legal documents associated with the proposed merger with the Sally/BSG business, so that information is available.

Justin Hott:

OK. Thank you.

Randy Pearce:

You're welcome.

Operator:

Thank you.

Randy Pearce:

Jaime, do we have any other calls in queue?

Operator:

We do. We have a question from Alex Vallecillo with Allegiant Asset Management.

Alex Vallecillo, Allegiant Asset Management:

Good afternoon. My question is on the Sally Beauty business. Have they experienced similar issues with some of the same suppliers by any chance? Or can you kind of help us understand the history of their business as it relates to some of these same issues and maybe what we should expect going forward in the combined company?

Randy Pearce:

Paul, let me take a stab at that one. Alex, the BSG business, which is the Sally Beauty distribution business, really is selling the same product that we're selling in our stores. They're selling to independent salon chains. So they will also see the new no the repackaged lines coming through their distribution channels just as we are. The one difference, to their credit, that they're able to manage margins better is because Sally or the BSG distributors are able to sell the repackaged lines to independent salon chains and a lot of the times to booth operators at trade shows and still maintain their same margins. One of the things that we've talked to you know we've had conversations with the management from BSG on this and clearly as we go forward under a new combined company, that gives us the ability that in the future not as a negative but a positive that should we find ourselves to be in the same situation in the future we could perhaps use the BSG distribution channels to move some of that excess old packaged merchandise at higher margins to the independent salon chains. Our strategy at Regis has been to really come out with the new lines as quickly as possible, it's a little different strategy.
