Item 8.01 Other Events.

On November 17, 2014, the Company issued a press release with respect to its Phase 2a/b study of TRV130 in acute postoperative pain. In the release, the Company announced positive top-line data from its randomized, double-blind, placebo- and active-controlled Phase 2a/b trial of TRV130 in moderate to severe postoperative acute pain. At doses of 2 mg and 3 mg TRV130 administered every 3 hours, the study achieved its primary endpoint of statistically greater pain reduction than placebo over 48 hours, successfully demonstrating proof of concept for TRV130. The trial was designed with key secondary endpoints to evaluate the differentiation of TRV130 from morphine at a standard reference dose of 4 mg every 4 hours. Over the 48 hour study period, TRV130 3 mg every 3 hours showed statistically superior analgesic efficacy compared to morphine. Additionally, the 2 mg and 3 mg doses of TRV130 demonstrated statistically superior analgesic efficacy to 4 mg morphine in the first 3 hours of dosing, when study pain was most severe. For these doses, patients also reported maximum pain relief during the first dosing period that was statistically superior compared to morphine. Notably, in this study TRV130 at 2 mg and 3 mg demonstrated similar tolerability to morphine 4 mg over 48 hours. TRV130 and morphine were both associated with opioid-related adverse events, including dizziness, headache, somnolence, nausea, vomiting, flushing, and itching.
