Item 3. Source and Amount of Funds or Other Consideration

Common Stock of the Issuer was acquired in open market purchases with working capital of Stichting Bewaarder Mayflower 1776 Value Fund. The amount of funds expended, including commissions, to acquire the shares held is $810,514.96.

Item 4. Purpose of Transaction

Mayflower acquired shares of Solitron Devices because it deemed the company's shares to be significantly undervalued. While we believe that the CEO and current management has done an excellent job managing the business operationally, we believe that Solitron Devices continues to trade at a significant discount to intrinsic value due to suboptimal capital allocation over a long period of time. The market barely assigns a value to the Solitron's core business, as it trades at 1.5x normalized EBITDA, and assigns no value to the $13.4 million in NOLs.

As the largest outside shareholder, we strongly urge the company to make meaningful efforts in allocating capital more effectively, while maximizing the NPV of the company's NOLs. Instead of diverting capital away in the form of dividends and potential large uneconomic capital expenditures projects, we would advocate a combination of share buybacks (combined with a large reverse stock split), value adding acquisitions in related or unrelated industries that are free cash flow generative and would speed up the utilization of the NOLs and/or investments in undervalued securities (supervised by an independent group of experts). In addition to ineffective capital allocation, we believe that corporate governance remains an important explanatory variable for the stock's undervaluation. We would recommend the board to remove the poison pill, as it serves as an ineffective measure for protecting the company's NOLs.

To achieve these goals and to remove the general perception of managerial disdain for outside shareholder interests, we believe it is elementary to strengthen the board of directors with one or two directors from the shareholder base, who can add capital allocation skills instead of industry experience to the board skill set. It would be a missed opportunity for the company and potentially hazardous, if these requests are once again ignored.
