Item 5. Other Events

As of October 23, 2000, the SEC adopted a new rule concerning insider trading. Rule 10b5-1 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 provides an affirmative defense to insider trading liability if a person established, at a time when the person was not in possession of material non-public information, a fixed, nondiscretionary plan to trade securities.

On or about March 5, 2004, James T. Boosales, a director of SRI/Surgical Express, Inc. (the Company), plans to enter into an individual sales plan complying with Rule 10b5-1 for trading in shares of the Company's common stock. Under this sales plan, up to 4,000 shares per month will be sold at specified times, provided that specified trading prices are achieved. The first sale under this plan is anticipated to be made on Monday, March 8, 2004. The sales plan terminates upon the sale of all the shares covered by the sales plan or upon certain other specified events.
