The following statements were made by Alberto-Culver at the Consumer Analyst Group of New York conference on February 23, 2006.

Howard Bernick, President, Chief Executive Officer and Director of Alberto-Culver:

Today, the Alberto-Culver Company is a $3.5 plus billion New York Stock Exchange-listed Company, comprised primarily of two businesses the development, manufacturing, marketing and sale of consumer brands, largely beauty products for hair care and skin care, and the distribution of professional beauty supplies through Sally Beauty stores and the Beauty Systems Group. It s the Sally/BSG distribution segment of the business that we announced last January, back in January, was going to be spun off and merged with Regis Corporation in a tax-free transaction. After the closing in late spring or early summer, what s left will be the Alberto-Culver Consumer Products segment of the business that Jim has been running.

A lot of people have asked us what was behind our decision to split the Company? And frankly, it s something that we ve been considering from time to time for many years. Firstly, conflicts have developed increasingly over the years with Sally and BSG's major vendors also being the consumer products archrivals, Procter & Gamble and L'Oréal, that we compete with on the consumer side. That's because L'Oréal and Procter have been out buying companies like Wella, and Clairol, and Matrix, and Redken and ARTec and a number of others.

Also, as Sally's retail business with consumers grew, there were increasing conflict with Sally trying to attract retail customers from the likes of food stores, drugstores, mass merchants like Walgreens, CVS and so on. Splitting the Company alleviates this channel conflict. And secondly, both Consumer Products and Sally/BSG have each reached sufficient size to be viable, stand-alone entities on their own.

A more recent conflict came up just last year when we acquired Nexxus, which you will hear more about later and decided to take Nexxus out of the salon field into retail. This was something that was in the very best interests of our Company and Alberto-Culver shareholders but also something that won us no friends in the salon industry with our BSG customers.

Furthermore, Sally's strategy going forward was to enter the services and salon side of the business on its own in order to be more than just a distributor and become an even more important partner to our suppliers, primarily with the desire to sell more professional products directly to consumers through salons. It would have taken us literally decades to get sufficient scale in the salon arena competing against Regis, competing against them for acquisitions, for real estate locations in the malls, competing against them for stylists and now we will achieve this overnight by merging Sally and BSG together into Regis. Regis Corporation, as you may know, is a global leader in beauty salons, hair restoration centers and beauty schools.

We've actually considered the idea of a merger with or acquiring Regis for a very long time. And we've been following the company for over a decade. We believe that Paul Finkelstein and his team at Regis have done an extremely fine job in a difficult though closely allied business to that of our Sally/BSG operations. Acquiring Regis would not have alleviated any of the conflicts I spoke about earlier and we see this as the right way to build value for the businesses and for our shareholders.

The benefits of the tax-free spin-merge are numerous. There are significant potential revenue enhancements—the creation of countervailing power to better control and significantly reduce professional product diversion; a more diversified revenue stream for both companies; stronger vendor relationships; cash flow accretion; and future acquisition opportunities and synergies.

After the merger, Alberto-Culver shareholders will own 54.5% of Regis by getting 0.6 of a Regis share for each Alberto-Culver share held and Regis will be a $650,000,000 EBITDA beauty industry giant, with over 11,000 salons, over 2400 Sally Beauty stores, over 800 Beauty Systems Group outlets and 1200-person direct sales force. And in addition, Alberto-Culver shareholders will receive a $3.00 per share cash dividend for each Alberto-Culver share held shortly after the closing.

Jim Marino, President, Alberto-Culver Consumer Products Worldwide:

Alberto-Culver will be distributed $400 million prior to the closing of the tax-free spin-merge between Sally/BSG and Regis. Approximately $280 million or $3.00 per share will be paid to Alberto-Culver shareholders as a special onetime cash dividend.

The remaining $120 million or so will remain on the Alberto-Culver balance sheet in addition to our existing cash. Alberto-Culver will also retain the $120 million 6.375% debentures that are due in 2028 and repayable at the option of the holders in 2008.

Now, what do we intend to do with the cash? Well, much the same that we've done in the past. What we will be on the look for is strategic acquisitions to complement and strengthen our Consumer Products portfolio. We'll also pay a quarterly cash dividend to Alberto-Culver shareholders. Initially, this is expected to be $0.16 per share annually. And we will also consider buying back some shares from time to time.
