Answers to Some
Employee Questions for Day One

Will my benefits change on Day One?

With the first official day of our newly merged company almost here, this edition of Merger Update focuses on some important employee questions. As a reminder, employees can continue to forward questions to emcom@nu.com or merger.questions@nstar.com.

No. However, over time we will look to standardize programs.

How do I report illness?

As we work to standardize business processes, the following illness reporting changes are being made for non-union NU and NSTAR employees. (Note: Union-represented employees will continue to follow their current illness and disability reporting at both companies.)

It is important to note that on Day One, there will essentially be no changes to existing benefits and other employee programs. But it is important to note, over time, there may be changes while we come together as one company.

Daily sick calls NU and NSTAR non-union employees will notify their immediate supervisor/manager; NSTAR non-union employees no longer need to call the HR Connect Line.

Thank you for your continued focus on safety and for your dedication to our customers.

Extended illness/disability NU non-union employees will continue to notify their immediate supervisor/manager and HealthLink on Day 3 of an absence to inform the company of a probable extended illness; NSTAR non-union employees will continue to call Liberty Mutual to initiate a disability claim if they expect to be out more than five days.

Planned extended absences NU non-union employees will continue to notify their immediate supervisor/manager and HealthLink at least two weeks in advance of planned surgery, maternity, etc.; NSTAR non-union employees will notify their immediate supervisor/manager and Liberty Mutual in advance of planned surgery, maternity, etc.

Union-represented employees All NU and NSTAR union-represented employees will continue to follow their current illness and disability reporting practices.

Will employees be able to apply for jobs at NU and NSTAR companies?

Yes. Employees will be able to apply for both union and non-union jobs at NU and NSTAR companies. Links to job opportunities will be available on company intranet sites. The current terms of the collective bargaining agreements with unions at NU and NSTAR will remain in place.

Will there be any changes to my pay schedule?

For existing NU and NSTAR employees, there will be no change in pay schedules for Day One. Over time, we will look for opportunities to standardize payroll between the companies.

What is the selection process going forward for the rest of the organization?

The selection process for the next level of management will begin shortly after Day One and will focus on Director level positions. Through April and May, the new leaders will work to develop their organization's structure and select their talent. This process is also designed to achieve a balanced selection of talent from each company that is ultimately focused on delivering exceptional service to customers.

Other Related Questions

What about my emergency response plan/storm assignment?

For Day One there are no changes to our companies' emergency response or storm plans. Therefore, all employee assignments in accordance with those plans will remain unchanged.

Will there be a change in the approval process or amounts authorized for approval by supervisors and above (e.g. invoices, capital projects, authorizations for payment (AFP's))?

Yes, there will be adjustments to accounting policies specifying the new supervisor and above transaction authorization levels. Examples of transactions with new spending limit authority levels include material requests, purchase orders, invoices, authorizations for payment (AFP's) and procurement card (P-Card) transaction approval levels. Details of the changes, which will be in effect when the merger closes, will be available on each company's intranet. Employees with Passport-related questions should continue to use existing Procurement/Purchasing contacts who will direct inquiries to someone who can provide assistance.

Will transactions continue to be required to be competitively bid?

With limited exception, transactions over $50,000 are required to be competitively bid. Where criteria are met for sole/limited sourcing, a sole/limited source justification form, signed by the responsible business unit officer, is required. NU and NSTAR employees should contact Procurement/Purchasing for assistance.
