» Bev Goulet, Robert Isom, Provide Integration Management Office Update

In a joint communication to the people of both companies, Bev Goulet, American's Senior Vice President and Chief Integration Officer, and Robert Isom, US Airways' Executive Vice President and Chief Operations Officer, report the latest on our progress in planning the integration of the two airlines. The Integration Management Office (IMO) the nerve center

As we have previously shared, there are 29 teams planning the integration of our commercial, customer-facing, operations, and corporate and staff functions for our two airlines. We've also created several cross-functional taskforces that will work on specific objectives, state Goulet and Isom. American Supports Junior Achievement Bowl-a-thon

A group of American Airlines and American Eagle employees regularly give back to Irving, Texas students. Led by Mark Mitchell, Managing Director Jetstream Program, the employees spend one day every year teaching Junior Achievement at Barton Elementary School. They've also held a bowling tournament every year to benefit Junior Achievement programs throughout the area. The employees moved over to AMF Eules Lanes for this year's bowling event. About 170 employees formed 39 teams that sported whimsical names such as the Funtastic Four and Incredi-Bowls; the theme was superheroes.

Editor's Note: The event helped raise more than $39,000 for Junior Achievement.

Southwest Awarded New Route at Washington Reagan National

Southwest will add nonstop service between Washington Reagan National (DCA) and Houston Hobby. The U.S. Department of Transportation selected Southwest to take the two slot exemptions abandoned by Spirit Airlines when it shifted its operations from DCA to Baltimore/Washington International (BWI). One slot or slot exemption allows a single takeoff or landing, so a pair allows an airline to add round-trip service from the airport. Spirit had used the slot exemptions to fly between DCA to Fort Lauderdale. But, in September 2012, the carrier said it would move its D.C.-area operations to BWI so it could expand. Unlike DCA, BWI is not capacity controlled. Spirit now flies to four destinations nonstop from BWI.
