Southwest Bank Misleads on Trust Expenses

The Trust's general and administrative (G&A) expenses increased in recent quarters not from inefficient management

but due to increased

audit
and legal costs related

to
the ConocoPhillips
litigation.

Southwest Bank claims that the Trust's G&E expenses increased significantly since Ms.

Anderson's
departure,
but it
fails
to tell you
that:

As disclosed in the Trust's Form 10-K and 10-Q filings with the SEC, the increased costs are primarily related to the Trust's litigation against Burlington, a subsidiary of ConocoPhillips, which began in 2014 and is scheduled for trial in March 2017. Litigation expenses have increased this year as the parties prepare for trial, engage expert witnesses, continue discovery and attend mediation sessions.

These
expenses
would have been
the same even if Ms.
Anderson
were still
the trust
officer.
She
acknowledges
that she would use
the same
litigation
team Compass
Bank
uses.
Compass
Bank
believes this

litigation
is worth
pursuing.
The Trust's
claim
is for monetary relief in excess of $12 million.

Southwest Bank Misleads on Trust Expenses (cont d)

When
litigation
expenses
are excluded,
Trust
G&A
expenses
have
consistent,
generally

rising in the first quarter (as expenses increase with annual reporting obligations) and falling again by the end of the year. Ms. Anderson's departure during the fourth quarter of 2015 did not impact the Trust's G&A expenses.

Note: For a reconciliation of adjusted G&A expenses to reported G&A expenses, see the appendix at the end of this presentation. Adjusted G&A expenses for 3Q 2016 excludes expenses incurred in responding to Southwest Bank's self-interested proxy campaign.

Aside from litigation expenses, increased G&A expenses since Ms. Anderson's departure are primarily attributable to costs of updating SOX compliance procedures and auditing ConocoPhillips information.

Southwest Bank Misleads on Conflicts of Interests

Southwest Bank and Ms. Anderson should know that Compass Bank has no conflict of interest.

Southwest Bank claims that Compass Bank has a demonstrated conflict of interest because Charles McMahan, a director of BBVA Compass, also serves as an independent outside director of Enterprise Products Holdings. Affiliates of Enterprise gather and process gas attributable to the Trust's royalty properties.

Had Southwest Bank and Ms. Anderson understood how the Trust operates, they would know that there is no conflict of interest:

Enterprise and its affiliates process gas for ConocoPhillips, not the Trust. The Trust has only an interest in the net proceeds from ConocoPhillips' sale of the gas. This is disclosed in the Trust's Form 10-K filings.

ConocoPhillips, as the principal operator of the properties underlying the Trust's royalty, determines which service providers to use, negotiates the terms of the contracts with them, and is a party to the contracts.

The Trust is NOT a party to any of the purchase, gathering or processing contracts.

ConocoPhillips entered into a contract with Enterprise in 2011 during Ms. Anderson's tenure at Compass Bank. Ms. Anderson reviewed the contract, which will not terminate until 2026. This is also disclosed in the Trust's Form 10-K filings.

Compass Bank reviewed the terms of the 2011 Enterprise contract with a third-party consultant to confirm that they were fair to the Trust.

(2)

Ms. Anderson should understand this. In making this argument, she and Southwest Bank demonstrate that either they do not understand how the Trust operates or they intend to mislead unit holders.

Southwest Bank Misleads on Conflicts of Interests (cont d)

Southwest Bank claims that Compass Bank has a conflict of interest because its parent company holds shares of ConocoPhillips.

Southwest

Bank

fails

to tell

you

the shares

are held on behalf of

bank

customers

as part

routine

trust

and investment

services.

Compass Bank has no pecuniary interest in the shares.

Southwest

to tell

you

number

of

shares

extremely small, amounting to about 0.003% of the outstanding shares of ConocoPhillips.
The fact that Compass Bank has ongoing litigation against ConocoPhillips to recover underpayment of royalties is further evidence that Compass Bank has no conflict of interest.

Southwest Bank Misleads on Time to Vote

Southwest Bank claims that Compass Bank is trying to restrict unit holder voting by allowing 28 days to vote.

Southwest

Bank

fails

to tell

you

a

voting

period

about

30 days

is

generally recognized as sufficient time to vote.

Southwest

Bank

fails

to tell

you

that

it

originally sent

proxy

cards

to

most unit holders starting on October 14, 2016, effectively giving them 38

Southwest

Bank

fails
to tell
