Among other things, the Amendment removes the three existing targets under the Servier Agreement and adds a new target, microRNA-92, and provides Servier with (i) an exclusive license to research, develop, and commercialize MRG-110, the Company's product candidate that targets microRNA-92 for the treatment of diseases through revascularization, in all countries, other than the United States and Japan where the Company retains all rights, as if microRNA-92 were an original target under the Servier Agreement, and (ii) the right to obtain such an exclusive license for another target to be named by Servier no later than September 30, 2019. Additionally, the Amendment extends the term of the research collaboration between the Company and Servier until September 30, 2019 or the date of completion of the agreed upon research activities, whichever is later. Under the terms of the Amendment, Servier agreed to reimburse the Company for a specified amount of the costs associated with the manufacture and production of the MRG-110 drug product when the drug product is delivered and ready for use, and the Company agreed to be responsible for a specified amount of the pre-Phase 3 costs that it incurs under the Servier Agreement in the third quarter of 2017. Servier also agreed to pay the Company a one-time milestone at a specified amount upon the earlier of the completion of a specified development goal or November 15, 2017.

As a result of the Amendment, Servier's rights to the three removed targets and product candidates directed to such removed targets are terminated and returned to the Company.
