Behind the Merger with Ken Frazier

This is an exciting opportunity for global human health and Merck because the proposed combination of Schering and Merck provides a significantly broader portfolio of products which are complementary to our existing franchises. At the same time it allows us to expand our business across geographic regions where Schering is very strong outside the U.S. with about 70% of its sales. Most importantly it allows our sales representatives who already have very strong relationships with their customers to have an even broader set of products, to be even more relevant to our customers on every level.

This combination is also good for patients because it allows us to bring to physicians and caregivers a broader line of therapies.

Currently Merck has Fosamax plus D as well as Gardasil and these products respond to the needs of women who have osteoporosis as well as protecting women against cervical cancer. Now, together, we will have products that address fertility needs as well as contraceptive needs. So once again, we bring forward a broader stable of products that meet the needs of women across the age spectrum.

Over the past few years, we've been working very hard in Global Human Health to ensure that our customer facing model meets the needs of all of our customers: patients, payers, and physicians. Schering-Plough has also worked on having a more customer- centric model. As we bring together these businesses, I believe we'll have the basis to combine them and to ensure that our customers have the right kinds of interactions across the spectrum of opportunities that we would like to provide them.

What's most exciting to me about this merger, is that this combination provides us with a strong, deep, group of products that are in the market now. But perhaps most importantly, because this business is about innovation, I am excited about the pipelines that we are bringing together once again in complementary areas of medicine. And I believe when you look at this broad, deep pipeline of novel products, you will see that this combination will make Merck and Schering together a formidable, strong company for many years to come.

Forward-Looking Statements

This communication includes “forward-looking statements” within the meaning of the safe harbor provisions of the United States Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. Such statements may include, but are not limited to, statements about the benefits of the proposed merger between Merck and Schering-Plough, including future financial and operating results, the combined company’s plans, objectives, expectations and intentions and other statements that are not historical facts. Such statements are based upon the current beliefs and expectations of Merck’s and Schering-Plough’s management and are subject to significant risks and uncertainties. Actual results may differ from those set forth in the forward-looking statements.

The following factors, among others, could cause actual results to differ from those set forth in the forward-looking statements: the possibility that the expected synergies from the proposed merger of Merck and Schering-Plough will not be realized, or will not be realized within the expected time period, due to, among other things, the impact of pharmaceutical industry regulation and pending legislation that could affect the pharmaceutical industry; the ability to obtain governmental and self-regulatory organization approvals of the merger on the proposed terms and schedule; the actual terms of the financing required for the merger and/or the failure to obtain such financing; the failure of Schering-Plough or Merck stockholders to approve the merger; the risk that the businesses will not be integrated successfully; disruption from the merger making it more difficult to maintain business and operational relationships; the possibility that the merger does not close, including, but not limited to, due to the failure to satisfy the closing conditions; Merck’s and Schering-Plough’s ability to accurately predict future market conditions; dependence on the effectiveness of Merck’s and Schering-Plough’s patents and other protections for innovative products; the risk of new and changing regulation and health policies in the U.S. and internationally and the exposure to litigation and/or regulatory actions. Merck and Schering-Plough undertake no obligation to publicly update any forward-looking statement, whether as a result of new information, future events or otherwise. Additional factors that could cause results to differ materially from those described in the forward-looking statements can be found in Merck’s 2008 Annual Report on Form 10-K, Schering-Plough’s 2008 Annual Report on Form 10-K and each company’s other filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission (the “SEC”) available at the SEC’s Internet site (www.sec.gov).
