Subject: Announcing Senior Leadership Appointments for Aon Hewitt Post-Close
Date: August 26, 2010

It is hard to believe that it has been just over a month since Aon Consulting and Hewitt announced our plans to come together. Our senior leadership teams have been hard at work getting to know each other and our respective businesses. These insights are helping them to develop a compelling plan to guide our future. Knowing the talent and dedication of these two teams, I am extraordinarily excited about what our combined enterprise will accomplish as Aon Hewitt. One of the most frequent questions I am asked is, "When will we know who is leading each part of the business?" I am pleased that we are far enough along in the regulatory approval process that I am able to announce the first level of the Aon Hewitt leadership team.

Chairman and CEO of Aon Hewitt

As announced earlier, Russ Fradin, current Chairman and CEO of Hewitt, has agreed to become the Chairman and CEO of Aon Hewitt at closing. The continuity of Russ' strong leadership is an important part of the story for clients, associates, and investors. Russ has led a remarkable transformation since joining Hewitt four years ago. He led the team to deliver impressive financial results even in the face of a global recession - improving client satisfaction and associate engagement levels at the same time. Russ will be joining the Aon Executive Committee - the senior leadership team providing counsel to me on the overall strategy and direction for Aon Corporation. He will continue to be located in Lincolnshire, with a satellite office at the Aon Center in Chicago, so he can regularly interact with leaders across the company. He is fully committed to a successful integration that takes full advantage of the unique and distinct capabilities of both Aon and Hewitt.

Aon Hewitt's Senior Leadership

Given the exemplary talent represented on both of our teams, leadership selection decisions have not been easy. As a group, Russ' direct reports will bring a strong global orientation to decision-making. They have each cultivated deep and trusted relationships with many of our most important clients that we can build on to achieve our growth aspirations. And, they possess an impressive depth of experience delivering the broad range of services we bring to market. Our firms share a set of guiding principles around client focus, teamwork, innovation, results, and values. While we may use slightly different words, it is clear we are aligned on the core behaviors and expectations we have for our leaders and I can assure you that this group of leaders fully embodies these principles. We will continue to use these principles as our guide as we move on to design the new organization and the broader leadership team.

Business Segment Leaders

Aon Hewitt will consist of three global businesses: HR Consulting, Benefits Administration, and HR Business Process Outsourcing. The following leaders will report to Russ and have responsibility to build and deliver on the full potential of the new Aon Hewitt.

- Baljit (Bal) Dail will become CEO of our Consulting business. He is currently the CEO of Aon Consulting and COO of Aon Benfield. In their current roles as heads of their respective consulting businesses, Eric Fiedler, Kathryn Hayley, and Yvan Legris are working closely with Bal to identify the global leadership team for Aon Hewitt Consulting. The team will be comprised of both regional and global practice leaders.
- Kristi Savacool will become CEO of our Benefits Administration business. She is currently Senior VP of Large Market Benefits Outsourcing for Hewitt.
- Jim Konieczny will become CEO of our HR Business Process Outsourcing (BPO) business. He is currently President of HR BPO for Hewitt.

Functional Leaders

An exceptional group of functional leaders will support the business. This group will have dual reporting relationships to both Russ and their aligned corporate Aon leader.

- Greg Besio is leading the overall Aon Hewitt integration. He is currently Aon's Chief Administrative Officer.
- Scott Ordway will become the CFO of Aon Hewitt. He is currently VP of Finance and Operations for Aon.
- David Baruch will become the CIO of Aon Hewitt. He is currently the CIO of Hewitt.

Edgar Filing: HEWITT ASSOCIATES INC - Form 425

- Neela Seenandan will become Global Head of HR for Aon Hewitt. She is currently Global Head of HR for Aon Benfield.
- Mark Sproat will become the General Counsel of Aon Hewitt. He is currently the Associate General Counsel for Hewitt Outsourcing.

Leader Transitions

As is typical in a merger of this size, some valued leaders will transition to new roles and others will pursue opportunities on the outside once the transaction is complete. Most of these decisions will be made post-close, but I can share a few of these transitions now.

We have asked Tracy Keogh, Hewitt's Senior VP of Human Resources, to take a senior position with the Aon Corporate Human Resources leadership team reporting to Jeremy Farmer, Aon's Global Head of HR. In her new role, she will work closely with senior Aon leaders to achieve the full potential of Aon

United creating a rewarding and compelling people proposition that allows us to continue to attract and retain the best team in the industry.

Vince Coppola, Hewitt Consulting's Chief Operating Officer, is joining the Integration Leadership Team and will assume overall responsibility for coordinating Hewitt's integration activities.

Rob Schriesheim, Hewitt's CFO; Steven Kyono, Hewitt's General Counsel; and Jay Rising, Hewitt's President of Benefits Outsourcing, plan to leave the firm upon the successful completion of the transaction. Each has played a unique role in Hewitt's impressive history and Russ and I are both extremely grateful for all they have done to get us to this historic place.

What's Next?

We are making significant progress on the integration. The integration teams we announced recently are working hard to develop detailed plans that will make the transition easier for all of us. We have now cleared the SEC and U.S. Hart-Scott-Rodino antitrust processes on the transaction and are working closely with the authorities in Canada and Europe as they complete their reviews. The shareholder vote for both companies is set for September 20. We are still working towards our November close date, but plan to be fully prepared if it is possible to close sooner.

Now that Russ has named his direct reports, these leaders will identify the go-forward organization structure for each part of the business. This will be followed by a thoughtful selection process to name the next level of leadership across the organization. We expect to name the Aon Hewitt Executive Council and the global leadership teams for each of the three businesses in early September.

Until closing, we urge you to continue to focus on your clients and their people delivering the same level of innovation, client service, and client satisfaction that have proven over time to be central to both firms' success. Thank you all for your continued commitment to your clients and to your fellow team members.

Best,
