Excerpt from Video Address by Duncan Niederauer, CEO of NYSE Euronext, to Employees

March 1, 2013

Duncan: Greetings, everybody. I'm coming to you today from the Conrad Hotel in lower Manhattan where we're having our annual leadership forum here today. It's been an interesting month. That's a pretty high bar for me, so if I say it's been an interesting month, trust me—it's been an interesting month. It's a month started with us reporting our fourth quarter earnings from last year and now we're wrapping it up here at the Conrad with the leaders of our company talking about the plan for 2013 and beyond.

What I thought I'd start with today is just some deal updates. I know that's in everybody's mind, and I thought I'd talk to you a little bit about the progress we're making on the transaction with our friends at ICE. First of all, you probably saw from your corporate communications team that we've already gotten Hart-Scott-Rodino clearance, so no second requests from the DOJ here in the United States, so we're very excited about that. We filed the S-4 with the SEC. We've already gotten the first round of comments back, and we'll be going back with responses to those comments in the very near future, and that keeps us on track for a shareholder vote sometime in the second quarter.

I had a chance to go to Paris last week and spend some time not only with our own people in a town hall meeting, but I spent some time with our friends at the Treasury and also the French Regulator, the AMF. Very good dialogue at all the meetings. I got a lot of good feedback not only from our employees, but also from the folks at Treasury and at the Regulator. We continue to stay very engaged with our college of regulators in Europe. Our next regularly scheduled quarterly meeting is March 27th. Jeff and I will both be there, and what we'll be largely focused on at that meeting is providing more details around the proposed IPO of the Euronext assets—so, more to come on that in the coming weeks.

Jeff and I have also been out meeting with a lot of stakeholders, be they regulators or customers, and we continue to solicit very good feedback from all of them so we can make sure we keep moving forward in a way that makes sense for everybody.

On the integration front, we're progressing nicely. I spent the better part of the day last Thursday down in Atlanta with Jeff and Scott Hill, who will be the CFO of the new company, and we're really starting to get through a lot of the different work streams as we try to figure out how to put these two great companies together.

I intend to stay until the end of 2014 at least. I've committed that to the Board. I've committed that to ICE. I've committed that to some of our shareholders. That is absolutely my intent. So I intend to stay as the president of the new company and the CEO of NYSE group. Scott Cutler will run listings. Joe will run the U.S. equities trading business. Steve Crutchfield will continue to run the U.S. options business. Steve will report to Joe, as he does now, and Joe and Scott, we envision, will report to me. We'll have more to come on the organization. I ask two things of you: one, be patient; you know we communicate when we have the information. And two, if you hear something we haven't shared with you or it's inconsistent with what we've told you please give us the benefit of the doubt, as I think you always do, and know that we'll communicate in due course when and as we make these decisions.

END.
