Great Plains Energy to acquire Westar Energy

Great Plains Energy Inc., the parent company of KCP&L, and Westar Energy, announced on May 31 a definitive agreement for Great Plains Energy to acquire Westar. The companies anticipate closing in the spring of 2017 after all approvals have been secured.

Nothing happens quickly in these types of transactions. You should expect no changes and it is business as usual. We value our existing Energy Management Agreements (EMA). EMA business is a valuable, dependable and consistent structure of business. We sincerely appreciate you.

Once the transaction is complete, Great Plains Energy will have nearly 13,000 megawatts of generation capacity, almost 10,000 miles of transmission lines and over 51,000 miles of distribution lines.

Our companies have a long-standing relationship of working together. Currently, Great Plains Energy and Westar jointly own 94 percent of the 1,200 megawatts Wolf Creek Nuclear Generating Station, 1,418 megawatts La Cygne Station and 2,155 megawatts Jeffrey Energy Center. The combined company will have over 1.5 million customers and nearly 13,000 megawatts of generating capacity. This all results in a combined utility that will be in a position to better serve our customers, increase efficiencies, increase flexibility to meet environmental requirements and optimize investment for our future.

We will keep you apprised of progress and encourage you to contact us if you have any questions.
