Akebia Employee Frequently Asked Questions Document

1. What are the potential benefits of the combination?

The merger of Akebia and Keryx creates a renal-focused company committed to developing and delivering innovative therapeutic products. Keryx's Auryxia® (ferric citrate) is an FDA-approved therapy to treat dialysis dependent CKD patients for hyperphosphatemia and non-dialysis dependent CKD patients for iron deficiency anemia (IDA).

Akebia's vadadustat is an investigational, Phase-3 oral hypoxia-inducible actor prolyl hydroxylase inhibitor (HIF-PHI) with the potential to advance the treatment of patients with anemia due to CKD, many of whom are currently receiving injectable erythropoietin-stimulating agents (ESAs).

The companies believe that Auryxia and vadadustat, if approved by the FDA, have the potential to deliver an all-oral treatment approach for patients with anemia due to CKD. More broadly, the combined company has the potential to offer therapeutic options to patients across all stages of CKD, including non-dialysis dependent and dialysis dependent patients.

We believe the combined organization will become a partner of choice for the renal community and for companies developing renal products.

We expect the combined company to have the financial strength and flexibility to enable continued growth.

In addition, Keryx will provide Akebia with the infrastructure to mobilize commercialization and build launch momentum for vadadustat in the U.S., subject to FDA approval.

2. What does this mean for me? What can we expect between now and closing?

This is an exciting transaction for all of us, as it will position the combined company to be a kidney disease-focused, therapeutic leader with the potential for growth.

Until the transaction closes, Akebia and Keryx will operate as two separate companies. Our goals and mission at Akebia remain the same.

Optimizing the vadadustat clinical program and enabling vadadustat registration readiness will remain critically important.

We are in the process of developing a thoughtful integration plan.

Leaders and employees from both companies will be a part of the integration team in order to enable a smooth transition.

We will continue to keep you updated on our progress, as appropriate.

3. How will the merger benefit patients?

This is an exciting announcement for the renal community. The combined company, following completion of the merger, will have the potential to deliver an all-oral treatment approach for the treatment of anemia due to CKD. More broadly, the combined company has the potential to offer therapeutic options to patients across all stages of CKD, including non-dialysis dependent and dialysis dependent patients.

4. What are the next steps to complete the transaction?

The transaction is expected to close by the end of 2018, subject to customary closing conditions, including approval by antitrust authorities and approval of both companies' shareholders.

5. What are the integration plans? Who will lead the integration effort?

Today's announcement is the first step in a process and there are still many details to be determined.

Tamara Dillon, Senior Vice President, Human Resources, will be the integration lead and Candy Liang, Director, Strategic Planning, will be the integration operations lead.

We have started the integration planning process, which will involve team members from both companies. The integration team will work to address how we can best bring our companies together and support a smooth integration for our employees, partners and patients.

We will take a phased approach to integration, with the first step focusing on understanding the day-to-day priorities and operations of both companies.

Until the transaction is completed, Akebia and Keryx will operate as separate companies.

We will keep you informed as plans are finalized.

6. Will there be any immediate changes to Akebia's management team? What role will Keryx's interim CEO, management and employees play in the combined company?

After the close of the transaction, John Butler, President and Chief Executive Officer of Akebia, is expected to lead the combined company and Jason Amello will serve as Chief Financial Officer.

The combined company will be led by a management team with a long track record of success developing, launching and commercializing products for patients with kidney disease.

Until the transaction is completed, Akebia and Keryx will operate as separate companies.

Beyond that, it is very early in the process and many details will be determined in the weeks and months ahead.

7. What will be the name of the combined company?

The combined company will be named Akebia.

8. Where will the combined company be headquartered?

It is still early in the process. The integration team is still working through many of these important details.

We will keep you informed as plans are finalized.

9. Will there be any changes to employee compensation, benefits and plans?

Until the transaction closes, Akebia and Keryx will operate as separate companies and employee compensation and benefits will continue in the ordinary course.

10. What should I say if I m contacted by media, investors or other third parties about the transaction?

Consistent with our company policy, if you receive any inquiries from the media, partners, analysts or investors, please do not comment and forward such inquiries to Akebia s corporate communications contact, John Garabo, at jgarabo@akebia.com or (917) 892-2514.

11. What should I say if I am asked questions by the vendors or partners I work with?

You can let them know that this is an exciting transaction for all of us. By joining together with Keryx, we have the opportunity to create a company that is well positioned to compete, grow and lead in the treatment of renal diseases. Until the transaction is completed, Akebia and Keryx will operate as two separate companies. There is no change to our day-to-day operations. You can also direct them to our corporate website to access our press release for further details.

12. Who can I contact if I have more questions?

As we move through this process, we will keep you informed on important developments.

If you have any questions, please speak with your manager. More communication and information on where to direct questions will be coming from the integration team shortly.
