On May 3, 2006, Allergan, Inc. (Allergan) issued a press release announcing operating results for the first quarter ended March 31, 2006.

In its press release, Allergan included historical non-GAAP financial measures, as defined in Regulation G promulgated by the SEC, with respect to the three month period ended March 31, 2006, as well as the corresponding period for 2005. Allergan believes that its presentation of historical non-GAAP financial measures provides useful supplementary information to investors. The presentation of historical non-GAAP financial measures is not meant to be considered in isolation from or as a substitute for results prepared in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States.

In the press release, Allergan reported the non-GAAP financial measures adjusted earnings and related adjusted diluted earnings. Allergan uses adjusted earnings to enhance the investor's overall understanding of the financial performance and prospects for the future of Allergan's core business activities. Specifically, Allergan believes that a report of adjusted earnings provides consistency in its financial reporting and facilitates the comparison of results of core business operations between its current, past and future periods. Adjusted earnings is one of the primary indicators management uses for planning and forecasting in future periods. Allergan also uses adjusted earnings for evaluating management performance for compensation purposes.

In the press release, Allergan also reported sales performance using the non-GAAP financial measures of constant currency sales and adjusted total net sales. Constant currency sales represent current period reported sales adjusted for the translation effect of changes in average foreign exchange rates between the current period and the corresponding period in the prior year. Allergan calculates the currency effect by comparing adjusted current period reported amounts, calculated using the monthly average foreign exchange rates for the corresponding period in the prior year, to the actual current period reported amounts. Management refers to growth rates at constant currency so that sales results can be viewed without the impact of changing foreign currency exchange rates, thereby facilitating period-to-period comparisons of Allergan's sales. Generally, when the dollar either strengthens or weakens against other currencies, the growth at constant currency rates will be higher or lower, respectively, than growth reported at actual exchange rates. Adjusted total net sales represents reported sales adjusted to exclude prior period net sales for Japan and other sales, primarily consisting of sales to Advanced Medical Optics, Inc. (AMO) pursuant to a manufacturing and supply agreement entered into as part of the AMO spin-off. This manufacturing and supply agreement terminated in 2005. Allergan shifted to a third party license and distribution business model for its operations in Japan in 2005 and accordingly has recorded no current period product net sales for the Japan operations. Allergan uses adjusted total net sales to enhance the investor's overall understanding of the financial performance and prospects for the future of Allergan's core business activities. Specifically, Allergan believes that a report of adjusted total net sales provides consistency in its financial reporting and facilitates the comparison of net sales of core business operations between its current, past and future periods. Adjusted total net sales is one of the primary indicators management uses for planning and forecasting in future periods. Allergan also uses adjusted total net sales for evaluating management performance for compensation purposes. Constant currency sales and adjusted total net sales as defined and presented by Allergan may not be comparable to similar measures reported by other companies. This information and the information contained in the press release shall not be deemed filed for purposes of Section 18 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended, or otherwise subject to the liabilities of that Section. The information in this Current Report is not incorporated by reference into any filings of Allergan made under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, whether made before or after the date of this Current Report, regardless of any general incorporation language in the filing unless specifically stated so therein.
