Jack Moore:

Hello, everyone. I'm Jack Moore and I'm joined here by Scott Rowe, who as you know, will take the CEO role at Cameron International on October 5th.

We are entering an exciting new phase in our company's history, which is what we want to talk to you about today.

Hopefully you've had a chance to read the letter we sent to each of you along with the press release we issued. As you now know, Cameron announced an exciting transaction to join forces with Schlumberger.

This is great news for Cameron as it brings together two leaders within our respective fields to break new ground in our industry.

We entered into this transaction after very deliberate consideration. Our leadership team and our Board of Directors thought very carefully about the impact of the merger on our people, our customers and our shareholders.

After a thorough review, we determined that this combination will position Cameron for even greater success for many years to come.

We know the team at Schlumberger very well.

We've already seen the success we can achieve together through our joint venture, OneSubsea, which has remained strong during this downturn through its unique competitive advantages.

With OneSubsea, we have successfully proven that by combining the unique capabilities of Schlumberger and Cameron, we have created a winning combination that our customers have fully endorsed in the current environment.

Together, we now have a compelling opportunity to create a premier oilfield equipment and service company that will drive future growth with an integrated and expanded platform.

The combined company will allow us to better serve the evolving needs of our customers around the world and help address the current market challenges that our customers and operators are facing in today's environment.

Cameron and Schlumberger have similar values and share a strong commitment to safety, performance and a passion for exceeding our customers' expectations.

Together, we are confident that our companies will thrive with this new, complementary combination.

I'm proud to say that as part of our agreement, Scott will continue to lead Cameron upon my retirement and will serve on Schlumberger's executive team.

Schlumberger recognizes, as I did having worked closely with Scott for a number of years, that he is the right person to lead Cameron forward.

We believe this combination will deliver significant benefits for our customers and most importantly for you, our employees. We hope that you share our excitement about what this transaction means to our business and our employees.

I will let Scott talk a bit about what this transaction means for you and also what you can expect in the coming weeks. Scott?

Scott Rowe:

Thanks, Jack.

First, let me begin by saying I am personally very excited about this announcement and to have the opportunity to lead Cameron in realizing the full potential of this combination.

I want to emphasize my commitment to this transaction and to our organization. I strongly believe in the opportunities this merger will create for our business, our customers and especially our employees.

When the transaction closes, Cameron will operate as one of four Product Groups within Schlumberger.

The Cameron brand will remain prominent within Schlumberger, and we do not expect much will change at the day-to-day operating level.

As Jack mentioned, we've already collaborated together for three years on OneSubsea and I have seen first-hand the value we can create when we combine our respective areas of expertise.

While Schlumberger is the world's number one integrated oilfield service company, it currently does not have the world-class flow control equipment and manufacturing expertise that we bring.

By joining forces, Schlumberger and Cameron will be better positioned for growth and value creation in an environment where our customers' needs are becoming increasingly complex.

While we look forward to realizing the significant benefits of the transaction and what it will mean for our business in the long-term, in the near-term our top priority will be the safety of our employees and continuing to operate as usual.

So what should you expect as employees?

Joining with Schlumberger will provide new career development and advancement opportunities.

Schlumberger has a world-class employee development program, and Cameron employees will benefit from being part of the larger global Schlumberger organization.

Until the transaction closes, we will continue to operate as an independent company. We are relying on all of you to continue serving our customers with the same quality and commitment they've come to expect from us.

The most important thing we can do is stay engaged, flexible and focused on our day-to-day responsibilities by continuing to maintain a safe work environment and providing exceptional customer service.

The more focused we are during this period, the more opportunities we will have when we close the transaction and we will be better prepared for the market recovery.

I know you all have a lot of questions, which is understandable. And as always, we are committed to operating with transparency and keeping you informed throughout the process. However, please keep in mind that we are still very early in the process and there is still much that needs to be worked out between now and closing.

I, and other members of the executive leadership team, will be visiting with many of you in various locations in the coming weeks to further discuss the transaction and answer any questions you may have.

We will also have other forums for you to submit questions and further communications as we move forward.

In the meantime, I encourage you to review the Frequently Asked Questions document we shared regarding the announcement, which we will update throughout this process as more information becomes available.

I would like to turn it back to Jack now for his closing remarks.

Jack Moore:

Thanks, Scott.

In closing, I want to assure you that our employees were top of mind during the negotiation process and will continue to be a priority as we move forward.

We believe this is a great opportunity for all of our stakeholders and will position Cameron for long-term growth and success. Cameron is a very well-respected brand and very widely regarded in our industry. This is all due to your efforts and commitment to what you do each and every day.

On behalf of the Board of Directors, Scott and the rest of the executive leadership team, I want to personally thank each and every one of you for your continued commitment, engagement and support.

I am very proud of our achievements and am confident that combining with Schlumberger, and Scott's leadership, Cameron will continue to reach new and greater heights in the years to come.

We are excited about this next chapter in our history and we thank you again for all that you do for Cameron.

Thank you.
