Subject: Agreement with Praxair on termsheet for potential merger

Dear colleagues,

I would like to personally inform you that we agreed with Praxair on a non-binding term sheet for a potential merger of equals between our companies. This means that we have settled on a set of conditions that we believe are a sound basis for further negotiations. In the next weeks and months, we will continue our talks and find the right solution for a combination that will offer the maximum benefits to our respective stakeholders.

Let me give you an update on developments since I returned to Linde as your new CEO. Based on what I discussed with my colleagues in the Executive Board and with the works council representatives, I held intense conversations with the management of Praxair over the last few days. It became very clear that both teams are entirely convinced that a merger of equals would create significant value for both companies.

That is what ultimately drove us to overcome the governance issues of this potential merger. Both parties, recognising the strategic rationale of this opportunity, worked together constructively to reach a mutual understanding that meets the interests of both sides.

While we have now achieved a very important interim result, there are many more aspects we need to discuss before we can proceed. The execution of a definitive business combination agreement remains subject to confirmatory due diligence, further negotiations and Board approvals of both Linde and Praxair. But with the signed term sheet, we have been able to agree on the general conditions framing our merger discussions going forward:

We agreed to call the new company Linde to emphasise our rich heritage and the reputation of our brand, and also to acknowledge the shared historic roots of the two companies.

The combined company would be governed by a single board with equal representation from Linde and Praxair. Our Board Chairman, Professor Dr Wolfgang Reitzle, would become Chairman of the new company's Board. Praxair's Chairman and CEO, Steve Angel, would become CEO.

The new holding company would be domiciled in a neutral European state with a strong presence in Germany. The CEO would be based in Danbury. Corporate functions would be allocated between those two locations after conclusion of the merger so overlaps or duplications will be avoided. The company would be listed on both the New York Stock Exchange and Frankfurt Stock Exchange.

We intend to carve-out our Engineering Division into a wholly-owned subsidiary of Linde. This will give us the opportunity to secure both our Engineering business as the preferred supplier for Linde Gas, and greater visibility of the global Engineering brand to all customers in the market.

These terms reflect our goal that this merger would be a combination of trust and mutual respect and they form an excellent basis for further negotiations. I am very happy that this view is not only fully supported by my colleagues on the Executive Board, but also by all members of our Supervisory Board.

In parallel, we will continue to implement our LIFT efficiency programme as it is both prerequisite to safeguard our competitiveness and the best possible position in the negotiations. The global environment for our industry will continue to be challenging and fiercely competitive, so it is imperative that we get our operations in the best possible shape to move forward. Praxair is renowned for its impressive efficiency, and it is important in a merger of equals that we mirror these effective and dynamic operations. The specific details of the LIFT programme will be re-evaluated in the context of the merger discussions.

I am fully convinced that this merger with Praxair is the right step forward for this company. I feel honoured that I will be able to lead Linde through this next transformative chapter, and I look forward to working together with you to make this merger a success!

Let me close by taking this opportunity to personally thank you for your hard work and commitment, which have made Linde what it is today. I am counting on your continued support. These are particularly exciting and challenging times for all of us. All the more I wish you and your families a peaceful festive season and a happy New Year.

Best regards,

Aldo Belloni
