Corning Announces Mandatory Convertible Preferred Stock Offering

CORNING, N.Y. - Corning Incorporated (NYSE:GLW) announced today the completion of a public offering of $500 million aggregate amount of Series C mandatory convertible preferred stock. These preferred shares will be mandatorily convertible in August 2005 into shares of Corning common stock, and will be issued under the company's existing $5 billion universal shelf registration statement, declared effective by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission in March 2001.

In addition, Corning has granted the underwriters the option to purchase up to $75 million aggregate amount of additional preferred shares.

"Our primary operating objectives are to continue to protect the financial health of the company while driving toward profitability in 2003 with a strong focus on cash flow. Today's announcement is further evidence of that commitment. We are well down the path of our previously announced restructuring program, and this transaction represents a prudent step toward preserving the financial health of the company," said James B. Flaws, vice chairman and chief financial officer.

The mandatory preferred shares pay an annual dividend rate of 7.0% and are mandatorily convertible into between approximately 254 million and 313 million shares of Corning common stock on August 16, 2005.

Net proceeds from the offering will be used as follows:

- .. To purchase approximately $102 million of U.S. Treasury securities that will be pledged as collateral to secure the payment of dividends on the mandatory convertible preferred stock.
- .. To fund capital expenditures, operating losses, including cash restructuring spending, working capital requirements and general corporate purposes.
- .. To purchase and retire long-term debt securities with a weighted average interest rate of 4% per annum with maturities ranging from 2003 through 2029.

Corning's Board of Directors today declared an annual dividend of $7 per share on the Series C preferred stock for an aggregate amount of approximately $105 million payable quarterly, over three years. Corning will secure the payment of this dividend by using a portion of the proceeds from the sale of the Series C preferred stock to purchase U.S. treasury securities that Corning will pledge as collateral evidencing its obligation to pay dividends. The offering will result in a one-time reduction of between $0.11 and $0.12 per share in the third quarter in earnings available to Corning common shareholders.

Joint book-runners are Salomon SmithBarney, JPMorgan and Goldman, Sachs & Co.
